The objective of the forum is to provide agricultural leaders, civic clubs and extension groups, etc., an opportunity to obtain information on policy issues such as farm programs, flood control, monetary and fiscal policies, etc.

The counties send delegates representing farm organizations, extension groups, home economics clubs, and civic organizations. These leaders are expected to take the information back to their county and community groups.

District Follow-up Conferences

A series of ten to twelve district one-day conferences are held following the forum. Members of the agricultural extension economics staff and leaders attending the forum review the papers presented at the forum. Also, they attempt to answer the questions that were not answered during the forum. A part of the day's program is devoted to methods of presenting the information.

County and Community Meetings

Most of the counties then hold county meetings for their own extension leaders, farm organization leaders, and other groups, using these same leaders to present the information.

Thus, the papers presented at the forum serve as a basis for a program which ultimately reaches the county and community groups. The average attendance at the forum has been 800 to 1,000 leaders. These leaders, in turn, have made it possible to reach 40,000 to 50,000 people with this information.

WORK IN OHIO WITH FARM ORGANIZATIONS, GOVERNMENT AGENCIES, AND OTHER AGENCIES ON CURRENT PUBLIC PROBLEMS

By Mervin G. Smith

Reasons for Close Working Relationship in Ohio

1. Mutual understanding among leaders of various organizations.
2. Outstanding cooperative personalities in the various organizations have established habits of close working relationship which tend to be continued and followed through even among less cooperative individuals.

3. Many leaders came to their present leadership through Extension or the College of Agriculture.
4. Some leaders get together in conference more or less informally every few months at least—usually called by Extension, Farm Bureau, or PMA. Extension has taught conference method for at least twenty years.
5. Freedom of individuals in various organizations to consult with each other at state and local levels—especially Extension, Experiment Station, and College with the other agencies.
6. Recognizing aims, jobs, and problems of each agency; refraining from being antagonistic, not taking sides on delicate issues, but sticking to principles and facts.
7. Increased feeling of need for rural people to work together as technical advances are made and as the proportion of farm people becomes smaller.
8. Easy to get coordination and communication with nearly all state offices located in Columbus.
