BIBLIOGRAPHY OF CYPRIOT AGRICULTURE 1984-5

Derived from the AGRIS Data Base

AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE
MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NICOSIA

CYPRUS

FOREWORD

This is the second bibliography of Cypriot agriculture extracted for the AGRIS data base, and comprises the entries that appeared in AGRINDEX in 1984 and 1985 prior to the mandatory change to AGROVOC indexing, which came into effect on 15 August 1985. The previous bibliography covered the period 1975-1983 and was published as Miscellaneous Reports 12, of the Agricultural Research Institute.

This bibliography comprises 111 documents, of which 45 were published in Cyprus and were entered into the AGRIS system by the Cypriot AGRIS Liaison Office. The documents are indexed by subject category — indicated by an alphanumerical code, which is explained in the Table of Contents — by personal and corporate author, and by commodity.

It is appropriate to reiterate on this occasion the importance of AGRIS as a depository of national literatures, particularly those of developing countries. Such literatures are conveniently processed by AGRIS and are retrievable to the international community and the countries themselves, even though this may not be possible within the country itself.

The success of AGRIS as a global data base for agriculture gives pride to participating countries, particularly those, like Cyprus, that joined the System since its inception. The ready availability of the world's agricultural literature undoubtedly promotes food production, which is the ultimate goal of FAO and of the AGRIS system.

I wish to express gratitude to FAO, and particularly to the AGRIS team, both at the Coordinating Centre in Rome and at the Processing Unit in Vienna. I specially thank Dr. E. K. Samaha, Head, Systems and Projects Development Branch, and Ms Helga Schmid, Head AGRIS Processing Unit in Vienna, for extracting this bibliography from the AGRIS data base and supplying it in the form of photocomposed films ready for reproduction.

P. I. Orphanos
AGRIS Liaison Officer

Mid-December sowing gave the highest yields. The best population density was 33 plants per sq. meter planted in rows 30 cm apart. However, only ascochyta-blight resistant cultivars can be sown in mid-December. Non resistant cultivars must be sown in mid-March instead.

Jan 1985. 11 p. Technical Bulletin (Cyprus). ISSN 0070-2315. no. 63. 8 tables; 2 illus. 11 ref. Summary (En). *CY
The feasibility of growing safflower was investigated during 1968-1984. The best cultivar was kind (Rch) with mean grain yield of 1100 kg/ha and 37% oil content. Optimum spacing was in rows 35 cm apart with spacing on the row at 10 cm. Spring-sown safflower that received supplementary irrigation gave very high yields (5800 kg/ha). Under rainfed conditions yields of safflower were only 25% those of barley.

A selection of durum wheat from CIMMYT material outyielded the commercial varieties grown from 8% to 48%. Its plant height was 80cm, its 1000-grain weight 40g, its volume weight 80 kg/hl, its vitreousness 95%, its carotene content 6.5 ppm and its grain protein 15%. It utilized rainfall best producing 12 kg grain/ha/mm and gave very high yields also with supplementary irrigation. It was released as a commercial cultivar under the name Karpasia.

Pure line selection within the hooded barley variety Sanokriithi-79 revealed great genetic variability in dry matter yield, grain yield, heading date, plant height and disease resistance. However, yield of the presently grown hay variety Morocco 628 was still higher than that of the selected lines.

Bud fruitfulness of the cultivars was determined with the "water test method". All buds of Mavro were fruitful. In Xynisteri the basal bud rarely bore a cluster but all other buds were fruitful. In Verigo the basal, the first and the second bud were mostly non-fruitful, but all other buds were fruitful.

Thirty-nine field populations of Meloidogyne collected from 22 locations on the island of Cyprus and tested with Sasser's Host Differentials, revealed the presence of M. javanica and M. incognita. M. javanica and M. incognita race 2 were the predominant species while M. incognita race 1 was found only in one case. Mixed populations also occurred. None of the populations tested reproduced on cotton (cv. Deltapine 16) or peanut (cv. Florruner). Morphologically, the two species can be distinguished by the position of the excretory pore, this measuring 2.4 to 3.0 times the stylet length from the head tip to the excretory pore for M. javanica, and 1.4 to 1.9 times for M. incognita. Length of juveniles was of no value in distinguishing between these two species and the perineal pattern of the female also had little value.

Ewes weaned at 60 days produced more total milk than those weaned at 42 days, but both groups produced similar commercial milk yields. However, ewes suckling twins produced more total milk but less commercial milk than ewes suckling singles. Weights of carcass and other body components are presented for lambs slaughtered at 2, 42, or 60 days of age. Regression equations predicting carcass weight from liveweight are given. Male or twin lambs required less milk per unit of carcass gain than female or single lambs, respectively.
