UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Bureau of Agricultural Economics

Contributors

- B. RALPH STAUBER, after varied service in this Department, directed the statistical affairs of the War Relocation Authority and handled certain international aspects of the program with the State and War Departments. Again with BAE, he now heads the work on agricultural price statistics.
- C. KYLE RANDALL discussed parity prices in the opening number of this journal. He has taken part in all the statistical phases of the parity work of the Bureau.
- NATHAN M. KOFFSKY heads the demand and price analysis work of the Bureau. He is a member of the Conference on Income and Wealth of the National Bureau of Economic Research and represents the Department on interdepartmental committees on price indexes and on consumers' incomes, expenditures, and savings.
- GEORGE H. WALTER, agricultural economist in land economics work, wrote about strip coal mining in an earlier issue of Agricultural Economics Research.
- DONALD C. HORTON recently transferred from the Division of Agricultural Finance to the Bureau of the Budget, where he works in the field of transportation. He continues to hold courses in economics of agriculture at American University and the USDA Graduate School.
- GLENN L. BURROWS, besides serving on the faculties of the College of William and Mary and Wayne University, was statistician for a large industrial firm and research associate in the Institute of Mathematical Statistics at Chapel Hill before joining the Bureau's statistical consulting unit last July.
- EARL E. HOUSEMAN as statistical consultant, Office of Chief, has developed a consulting unit. His Designs of Samples for Surveys was the lead article in the opening number of Agricultural Economics Research.
- ARTHUR F. RAPER, social scientist, has studied farming conditions in many localities. GHQ in Tokyo will soon publish his Japanese Village in Transition. His books include Preface to Peasantry and Tenants of the Almighty.
