Contributors

Contributors are on the Staff of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics unless otherwise stated

- JOHN D. BAKER, JR. earned his doctorate at Purdue this year and is now engaged in price research with the firm of Longstreet Abbott in St. Louis.
- DON PAARLBERG is Professor of Agricultural Economics at Purdue University, specializing in prices and statistics.
- A. S. TODD, JR. is a forest economist in the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station of the U. S. Forest Service at Asheville, N. C. He was formerly in charge of computation and analysis of forest volume and growth data for the National Forest Survey in the same station.
- JOHN J. ZIRKLE, JR., an economist, formerly with the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station of the U. S. Forest Service at Asheville, N. C., is now in the Industry Division of the Forest Products Section of the Bureau of the Budget.
- CECIL C. SMITH has been with the Agricultural Estimates branch of BAE since 1942. His article is a report of a study made in the office of the State Statistician at Boise, Idaho.
- GLENN L. BURROWS is a member of the BAE statistical consulting unit. His paper, like the one he published in the April issue, is a byproduct of his work, which is directed toward the improvement of statistical techniques in marketing research.
- CHARLES E. KELLOGG, world authority in the field of soil classification and geography, has studied soil problems and made recommendations to governments for soil research and land development in England, France, Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Russia, Siberia, North Africa, the Belgian Congo, Egypt, Iran, Canada, Mexico, Australia, and New Zealand. The author of numerous bulletins and papers on the origin, classification, and conservation of soil, Dr. Kellogg's recent contribution to the UNESCO-FAO Food and People Series, Food, Soil, and People, attracted world-wide attention. He is Chief of the Soil Survey Division in the Agricultural Research Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture. His most recent book, Our Garden Soils, was published by Macmillan last April.
- L. JAY ATKINSON, formerly in the Division of Farm Management and Costs, BAE, is an economist in the Office of Business Economics of the Department of Commerce. He has worked both in agricultural economics and in the industrial and general economics field.
- ARTHUR G. CONOVER is head of the Tobacco Section in the Division of Statistical and Historical Research. He writes the periodical issues of The Tobacco Situation.
- ESTHER M. COLVIN, an editor on the staff of the Division of Economic Information, is a frequent contributor to the Agricultural Situation and other publications of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.
- HAROLD H. ELLIS, agricultural economist and lawyer, is a member of the staff of the Division of Land Economics. He is chairman of the Subcommittee on Legal Aspects of Land Tenure for the Southeast Land Tenure Research Committee.
- NATHAN M. KOFFSKY, a frequent contributor to Agricultural Economics Research, is Associate Head of the Division of Statistical and Historical Research. For several years much of his time has been devoted to analysis of economic conditions affecting demand for farm products.
