J. W. GANNAWAY, in charge of the Denver Marketing Field Office of the Fruit and Vegetable Division, AMS, works closely with the Colorado peach industry in the administration of the Federal marketing order regulating shipments of peaches produced in that State.

W. J. CREMINS, a marketing specialist in the Denver Marketing Field Office of the Fruit and Vegetable Division, AMS, has had considerable experience in the interpretation of meteorological data in relation to fruit and vegetable crops.

WALTER G. MILLER is an agricultural economist in the Land and Water Research Branch, Farm Economics Research Division, ARS. He was formerly a cooperative agent at Iowa State College, where he began to study efficiency in the use of resources under the various forms of farm-tenure arrangements. His present work also deals with land-tenure problems.

BEN H. PUBOLS is an agricultural economic statistician in the Agricultural Economics Division, AMS. He prepares the Fruit Situation and related material on fruits and tree nuts and conducts economic research in the same field.

CARROLL V. HESS is an agricultural economist with the Farm Economics Research Division, ARS. He is stationed at Cornell University, where he is doing cooperative research on opportunities for profitable adjustments in dairy farming.

HARRY A. STEELE is Chief of the Land and Water Research Branch, Farm Economics Research Division, ARS.

SIDNEY GERSHBEN is Head of the Foreign Competition Branch of the Fats and Oils Division, Foreign Agricultural Service. He is particularly interested in Nigerian peanuts; they are one of the major sources of competition for our soybean and cottonseed oils.

HYMAN WEINGARTEN, an analytic statistician in the Agricultural Economics Division, AMS, has been working in the area of demand and price analysis. Currently, he is engaged in applying econometric techniques to the electronic computer.

MARY E. LONG is a member of the staff of the Far East Branch, Foreign Agricultural Analysis Division, FAS. She is a regional specialist on Australian agriculture.
