The Crawford Fund

The Australian Academy of Technological Sciences and Engineering established the Crawford Fund in June 1987. Named in honour of the late Sir John Crawford, the Fund commemorates his outstanding services to international agricultural research. The Crawford Fund is a non-profit, non-government organisation, dedicated to raising awareness of the benefits to developing countries and to Australia of international agricultural research. The Fund depends on grants and donations from governments, private companies, corporations, charitable trusts and individual Australians. It also welcomes partnerships with agencies and organisations in Australia and overseas.

The Fund promotes and supports international R&D activities in which Australian research organisations and companies are active participants. It supports the work of the Australian Centre for International Agricultural Research (ACIAR), the Australian Agency for International Development (AusAID), the CGIAR Consortium and other international research centres.

The annual conference is a key part of the Fund's public awareness campaign, which increases understanding of the importance and potential of international agricultural research, its achievements and needs.

The Fund also runs training programs that fill a niche by offering practical, highly focused non-degree instruction to women and men engaged in agricultural research and management in developing countries.
