Data Tables: Reasons for Nonresponse in the 2009 June Area Survey

1. INTRODUCTION

This document is an extension of the National Agricultural Statistics Service's (NASS) report "The Road to Understanding Nonresponse in the 2008 June Area Survey" (RDD-10-04) and examines some of the reasons for nonresponse in the 2009 June Area Survey.

The National Agricultural Statistics Service's primary purpose is to provide timely, accurate, and useful statistics on United States and Puerto Rico agriculture. NASS conducts over 400 surveys annually for making estimates on crops, livestock, production practices, and identifying economic trends.

The June Area Survey (JAS) is an annual survey that provides information on U.S. crops, livestock, grain storage capacity, and number, type and size of farms.

The JAS sample is comprised of designated land areas known as segments. A typical segment is about one square mile -equivalent to 640 acres. Each segment is outlined on an aerial photo (2' by 2' in size) and provided to NASS' field interviewers. Field interviewers (known as enumerators) visit these segments and identify the owners/operators of all land within the segment. Land is then categorized into agricultural or non-agricultural and recorded on a paper form. For land where agricultural activity is occurring a separate paper questionnaire is completed for each agricultural operation operating any land within the segment.

1.1 Problem: Response Rates for the June Area Survey Are Declining

Over time, the JAS' response rate has been gradually decreasing by about half a percentage point a year. In 1996, the U.S. response rate was 87.9 percent. By 2008, this response rate had dropped to 80.2 percent. Once below 80 percent, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) will require NASS to conduct a nonresponse bias study which incurs staff resources to comply.

There are three types of survey nonresponse: 1) refusals, 2) inaccessibles, and 3) incompletes.

Refusals are operators who are not willing to respond or participate in the survey.

Inaccessibles occur when field enumerators are unable to contact or reach the operators for data collection.

A questionnaire is considered incomplete if several questions are left unanswered.

Overall, survey nonresponse negatively impacts data estimates, increases survey costs and data collection time, and significantly complicates the data editing and summarization processes. Nonresponse also increases the potential for biasing the estimates in a way that can not be easily assessed or identified.

1.2 Definitions

Segments:

Land areas with identifiable boundaries such as ditches, roads, railroads, streams, etc. that serve as sampling units in the JAS. Segments are assigned a permanent number and outlined in red on aerial photos. Segments generally range in size from one-half square mile to three square miles.

Tract:

An area of land inside a segment under one type of land operating arrangement.

There are two types of tracts:

- 1.) Ag. Tract: Consists of agricultural land.
- 2.) Non-Ag Tract: Consists of residential areas, shopping centers, lakes, woods, and any land not considered agricultural.

Usable:

Completed reports for agricultural tracts - questionnaires containing usable data.

2. METHOD

The 2009 JAS's sample was comprised of 11,168 segments across the 48 contiguous states. The enumeration of these segments resulted in 41,820 tracts indicating agricultural activity. Enumeration attempts for these tracts resulted in a U.S. response rate of 82.0 percent usable, with 9.1 percent refusing, and 8.8 percent recorded as inaccessible ^{1/}.

2.1 Enumerator Training

Field enumerators were instructed on the collection procedures for the JAS at an annual workshop conducted in May. For this study, the field enumerators in all states were provided the following instructions:

1.) In the event of a refusal, the field enumerator was to ask and record the operator's primary reason for not participating in the survey.

- 2.) For inaccessibles, the field enumerator was to document why the operator could not be contacted.
- 3.) For incompletes, the field enumerator would record why the operator did not answer specific questions.
- 4.) In all three cases, field enumerators were instructed to review a supplemental handout listing various nonresponse reasons, each of which had a corresponding code number. The field enumerator would record the code, best representing the operator's comments or situation, in the Office Use Box of the questionnaire. See Appendix A, "Reasons for Nonresponse Coding Sheet" for a copy of the supplemental handout. The reasons are ordered by refusals first, followed by inaccessibles and incompletes with each set listed by most popular choices based on previous nonresponse studies.

3. FINDINGS

Tables 1 and 2 show the reasons for nonresponse at the national level.

A refusal occurs when an operator declines to participate in the survey. In this case, the field enumerator records the reason for the refusal, determines which nonresponse reason best matches the situation from the supplemental handout, and finally codes the questionnaire appropriately.

There were 205 questionnaires not having a reason for the refusal and were excluded from the results. Of those questionnaires marked as refusal and having valid nonresponse codes, the top two reasons for refusal were: 1.) "Would not take time/ too busy," 2.) "Respondent refuses on all surveys, and refused this one."

^{1/} Total percent is less than 100% due to rounding.

A questionnaire is recorded as inaccessible if the field enumerator was unable to contact the operator. For inaccessibles, the field enumerators were instructed to code the nonresponse reason on the questionnaires.

The findings are displayed in Table 2. There were 308 questionnaires recorded as inaccessible for which the field enumerator failed to record a reason. These reports were removed from the analysis.

An additional 1,210 (40%) reports were cited as "Inaccessible but no reason provided." In the future, field enumerators need to convey in more detail why questionnaires were recorded as an inaccessible.

The top two reasons for questionnaires being coded as "inaccessible" are "Tried several times; could not reach anyone for an appointment." and "The operator is away on vacation or business."

Results by state are displayed in Appendices B and C.
