NOTES FROM HARDIN'S CORNER:

Staff greetings this year come from Brazil, California and Boston as well as Lafayette.

The Lynn Robertsons are coordinating the ICA sponsored Cooperative Training Program between Purdue and Brazil's twelve agricultural colleges and eight veterinary schools. Barbara Bailey is on the job there with the team. Headquarters, Vicosa, Brazil. Address: USOM/Brazil, APO 676, New York, New York. Raleigh Fosbrink is the on-campus program coordinator here at Purdue.

The Vern Ruttans are on leave at the Giannini Foundation, University of California, Berkeley, where Vern is researching water resource allocation problems.

George Baker (back in Indiana for wedding bells at Christmas) is on leave at the Harvard Business School. He's working with Dale Butz (Michigan State) on a team assignment as were the Cliff Coxes and Vern Phersons when on leave from Purdue at Harvard last year.

Here at home the pace continues to quicken as the Department's program attempts to anticipate and meet the needs of the third quarter of the 20th Century. Chuck French has taken over Robbie's work as Assistant Head of the Department. Our new undergraduate program of instruction in Agricultural Business Management gets under way this coming fall. This program combines Ag. Econ., Economics, Industrial Management with other agricultural and science courses. It is described in the new Agriculture catalogue. Paralleling this resident instruction emphasis is extension and research with agricultural business firms. Cliff Cox, Bill Farris, Bob Bock and John Day (Industrial Management) are working on a special USDA contract to produce and test educational materials for business planning with agricultural firms.

Dean Earl Butz' enthusiasm and ability to inspire are much appreciated. It is good to have the Butz family back in the Purdue community after their three years in Washington. We are all proud of the sharp upturn in undergraduate student enrollment here at Purdue this fall.

Our congratulations and best wishes to the Don Paarlbergs on their shift to Don's new White House address as Economic Advisor to President Eisenhower.

Our 73 graduate students list 10 different foreign countries and 22 different states as "home". Much of the strength of this fine group continues to lie in the quality of the men whom you recommend.

No, assistantships aren't available for all. Grants, however, are of increasing importance in our graduate and research programs. Some of the current ones include Vern Ruttan's from Resources for the Future; Jake Atkinson's from the Mutual Insurance Group; Woods Thomas' and Earl Kehrberg's from the National Plant Food Institute; Cliff Cox's and Jim Stevenson's from the Producers Swine Improvement Association; and Bill Morris' from the National Institutes of Health. Study fellowships such as those provided by the Kellogg Foundation and the Council on Economic and Cultural Affairs are also important.

J. Edwin Losey (1906-1957)

On July 25, 1957 Purdue University lost a respected and well-liked member of its staff--Ed Losey. In April of 1957 an incurable malignancy was found, which claimed his life three months later.

Ed had been on the Purdue staff since 1944, coming as a former member of the BAE research staff doing research on rural people in the Midwest. He began at Purdue as an extension rural sociologist and later assumed duties of teaching and research. During his 13 years of service to the University, he contributed to our understanding of rural life in Indiana, devoted much of his time to working with the people in the state, and spent many hours with students both in and out of the classroom.
