JUNE 16, 17, 18, 19, 1969

UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND

Niels Rorholm has been on Sabbatic leave since February. He has investigated coastal development processes and aquaculture in Florida and Denmark. He will return in September.

Andreas Holmsen conducted an evaluation of the fishing industry of Ghana for A. I. D. from December to March. He will be on Sabbatic leave in Peru for a year beginning in October.

Virgil Norton has been appointed coordinator of Sea-Grant Fisheries Research at the University. He attended an international conference on Training in Fisheries in Rome in April. He is the 1969 program chairman for the American Fisheries Society.

Arthur Jeffrey was appointed Professor and is now on the faculty of the Center for Community Planning at the University.

Charles P. Gratto left the department in June to join the faculty of the Center for Agricultural and Economic Development at Iowa State University.

John M. Gates joined the faculty in February after completing his doctorate at the University of California. His work here, in cooperation with the Marine Experiment Station, is related to 1) modeling the lobster economy and 2) aquaculture.

David W. Fischer joined the faculty on July 1, 1968 after completing his doctorate at Colorado State University. His work here is concerned with uses and development of the coastal zone. He has recently returned after presenting a paper to the International Federation of Park Administrators in Geneva and a survey of salt marsh management in Western Europe.

William Wallace is in Scotland for several weeks during the summer.

Albert Owens has accepted an extension appointment in community development.

Harlan Lampe has been appointed Professor and has been acting as chairman during Niels Rorholm's absence.

Dennis Paulaha will join the faculty in September from the University of Washington. He will teach advanced micro-theory and his research will relate to the theory of common property resource management.
