ABSTRACT

A significant number of States have laws directed at the ownership of U.S. land by aliens and business entities. These laws vary greatly from State-to-State in the degree of their severity. Thirty States have some type of law restricting alien ownership of land. Eight States require aliens to report their landholdings within the State. Thirteen States restrict business entities from owning land or engaging in the business of farming. Ten States have laws requiring business entities to report their landholdings within the State. An individual State may be included in more than one of the above categories.

Key words: State laws, aliens, corporations, landownership, restrictions, reporting requirements, land acquisition, statutes.

STATE LAWS RELATING TO THE OWNERSHIP OF
U.S. LAND BY ALIENS AND BUSINESS ENTITIES

Joseph W. Mayer*

INTRODUCTION

The following material is intended to be a guide for persons interested in determining the way State laws may affect alien or business-entity ownership of U.S. land. The objective is to present a summary of these State laws as they appear in the statute books. The laws included here are those which most directly affect the ownership of land, but there may be other laws which indirectly affect such ownership. Although in many cases the summaries include great detail for the sake of completeness, the interpretation of possible ambiguities and inconsistencies in the statutes is not frequently presented. This survey generally does not include court decisions concerning these laws, nor does it take into account the possibility that some State laws may be overridden by U.S. constitutional provisions or treaties. Therefore, although these summaries provide a comprehensive survey of State statutory laws, they should not be relied upon for determining the status of the law in a particular State. One should consult his local attorney to determine such status.

DESCRIPTION OF CONTENTS

The summaries are presented State-by-State, and each State summary is divided into two major categories: laws affecting aliens and laws affecting corporations and other business entities. Most of the laws affecting aliens are directed at nonresident aliens only. Corporations are specifically mentioned in the title because most State laws affecting the ownership of land by business entities are specifically directed at corporate ownership. Laws affecting aliens and business entities often overlap and, thus, both categories should be consulted. In instances where corporations are specifically included in statutes directed primarily towards aliens, or vice versa, cross-references are made in the summary.

The two major categories are sometimes further subdivided into two sections: one presenting laws restricting the ownership of land and the other presenting laws requiring the reporting of land owned in the State. In addition, laws which relate to the ownership of land by aliens and business entities which cannot be classified as restrictions or reporting requirements are set forth in a miscellaneous section. In States where there are no specific restrictions or reporting requirements for a particular category the summary includes a statement to that effect.

The section entitled "Restrictions" generally describes laws restricting the ownership or acquisition of land. The laws may encompass real estate in general, agricultural lands, or State lands. There may be an outright restriction or possibly a limitation on the amount of acreage that can be held, the duration for which it can be held, or how it may be acquired. Laws which give general affirmative rights to acquire land are usually not presented; only laws which in some way restrict the right to acquire land are included. In the category entitled "Corporations and Other Business Entities," the restrictions pertain to both landownership and the business of farming or ranching. However, laws pertaining to the general requirements for doing business in the State are not included in the summaries.

The section entitled "Reporting Requirements" describes laws requiring those persons or entities who own or acquire land in the State to file a report disclosing that fact. These laws generally require the owner of the land to provide identifying information about himself and the land he owns. Most States require corporations and some other business entities to file general annual reports, but their mention has been omitted from the State summaries.

In States which have exceptions to their restrictions or reporting requirements explicitly mentioned in the statute, the exceptions will be presented in the summary. The enforcement of the law or the penalty for its violation are also described in the summary when the statute includes them. In addition, States often differ in their definition of terms such as agricultural land, family farm corporation, authorized farm corporation, and others. In order to clarify the meaning of the restrictions, reporting requirements, and exceptions, some definitions are given when they exist in the statute. Two terms whose definitions are generally agreed upon, but which should be defined here, are alien corporation and foreign corporation. An alien corporation is one which is incorporated outside of the United States. A foreign corporation is one which is incorporated outside of a particular State, but not necessarily outside of the United States. Alien corporations are usually treated as foreign corporations unless they are separately mentioned.

SUMMARY

There are 30 States which have some type of law restricting alien ownership of land: Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. The restrictions on aliens vary greatly in the degree of their severity. Some States, such as Hawaii, merely have restrictions on the acquisition of State lands by aliens. Other States restrict the acquisition of land generally or agricultural land specifically, but some States, such as Maryland, may limit their restrictions to enemy aliens.

Indiana and other States restrict the amount of acreage that may be held. Finally, States such as Minnesota have outright prohibitions on alien ownership or acquisition of land, but they also generally have exceptions to those prohibitions.

There are 8 States which require aliens to report the land they own in the State: Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Ohio, and Virginia. The reporting laws generally exist to enable the States to monitor the degree of foreign ownership in their jurisdictions. Alien individuals, alien corporations, or U.S. corporations in which a significant interest is owned by aliens are usually the ones required to file these reports. The information required in the reports varies from State to State.

Thirteen States have laws restricting business entities from owning land or engaging in the business of farming: Arizona, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, and Wisconsin. Most of these laws restrict the ownership of agricultural land, but some restrict the ownership of real estate generally, while others restrict the purchase of State lands. Several States, such as Iowa, have long lists of exceptions to their general restrictions. An exception common to many States is one which excludes entities such as family farm corporations or authorized farm corporations from the general restrictions.

Ten States have laws requiring business entities to report the land they own in the State: Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, and South Dakota. Most of these laws pertain to business entities in general, while others only pertain to business entities in which a significant interest is owned by aliens. The information required in the reports varies from State to State.

As of September 1, five States have passed new legislation or revised old legislation in 1981: Florida, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, and North Dakota. Most of this legislation has involved restrictions on corporate ownership of land, but some has focused on other entities such as trusts and pension funds. A few of these States have also revised their alien landownership laws. More bills involving alien and business-entity ownership of land are frequently being introduced in the State legislatures. Thus, the possibility exists that changes in the present law may occur in the near future.

ARKANSAS

I. Aliens

A. Restrictions:

1. Although the statute mentioned below in I.B. is principally a reporting statute, certain sections may imply that there is a prohibition on ownership of agricultural land by foreign parties. See Ark. Stat. Ann. §§ 77-2209, 77-2210 (Supp. 1979). Ark. Stat. Ann. § 77-2209 (Supp. 1979) states that except as provided in the act, all aliens, whether or not residents of the United States, shall be capable of acquiring any interest in any real estate except agricultural land. See also Id. § 77-2210.

B. Reporting Requirements:

1. Any foreign party or agent, trustee, or fiduciary for a foreign party who acquires any interest (except leases and options of less than 10 years) in agricultural land in any manner, shall register such ownership in the office of the circuit clerk in the county in which the land is located, within 60 days after such acquisition. The registration shall include: (1) a description of the land acquired, and (2) the name and business address of the foreign party which acquired such lands or on whose behalf the lands were acquired. The clerk shall record the information and forward copies of the registration to the secretary of state. Ark. Stat. Ann. §§ 77-2203, 77-2204, 77-2211 (Supp. 1979).
2. Exceptions:
 - a. The act does not apply to agricultural land owned by a foreign party on the effective date of the act (April 19, 1979) nor to any alien while he is a bona fide resident of the United States. However, if an alien ceases to be a bona fide resident of the United States, according to one section of the act, he must register the ownership of his agricultural lands within 2 years, while another section seems to give him a period of 60 days in which to register. Id. §§ 77-2207, 77-2208.
 - b. Any foreign party who acquires agricultural land for nonfarming purposes is exempt from the reporting requirement in I.B.1. However, such a foreign party must file a declaration of intent with the secretary of state within 60 days of the acquisition. The declaration of intent must disclose: (1) the intended use of the land, (2) the foreign party's identity, and (3) a legal description of the land acquired. Any foreign party who acquires agricultural land for non-farming purposes and fails to put the land to the use described in his declaration of intent within 5 years shall register as required by I.B.1. Id. § 77-2210.

3. Enforcement: The attorney general may enforce the act by filing an action in the circuit court of the appropriate county. If the attorney general refuses to bring an action, any person claiming a violation may bring an action. If a court finds a violation of the act, it may order that the agricultural land be divested within 2 years to a nonforeign party. Any land not divested within 2 years shall be ordered sold at public sale. Id. §§ 77-2205, 77-2206.

4. Definitions:

- a. Foreign party: 1) Nonresident aliens, 2) foreign governments, 3) alien corporations, partnerships, trusts, and other legal entities, and 4) any corporation, partnership, trust or other legal entity in which a significant interest is held by any combination of 1, 2, or 3 above.
