The Journal of Agricultural Cooperation is a refereed journal published by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. Its purpose is to encourage research on issues of importance to U.S. farmer cooperatives and provide a forum for the review and exchange of research results among individuals in universities, cooperatives, and government.

The Journal invites manuscripts of practical interest to U.S. farmer cooperatives. Submissions should report results of applied or basic research on economic, legal, or sociological aspects of farmer cooperation. Reviews will be conducted anonymously by members of the respective professions. Articles will be selected on the basis of interest to cooperatives and researchers, originality, and effectiveness of presentation.

Please follow "Guidelines for Submitting Manuscripts." Manuscripts will be accepted at any time. Deadline for submitting manuscripts for the next issue is October 1, 1991, but early submission is encouraged to ensure consideration for the issue. Articles published will be subject to a page charge of $40 per printed page. Authors without financial support from an employer may petition for an exemption.

The seven articles in this issue were selected from eleven manuscripts reviewed for publication.

The Editorial Board wishes to offer their sincere thanks to the following individuals, who reviewed manuscripts considered for this issue:

A Message from the Publisher

This 1991 volume of the Journal of Agricultural Cooperation is the first to be published by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. It is, therefore, an appropriate time to reaffirm the purposes of the Journal as they were expressed six years ago when the first issue was published. They are to:

- Encourage basic and applied research on issues of importance to cooperatives and their members.
- Provide a marketplace for the exchange of cooperative research results and thinking among academics, cooperative leadership, and cooperative membership.
- Provide a means for a rigorous review of thought and writings on cooperative topics.

NCFC is pleased to assume the responsibility of working with the academic community to publish this journal on agricultural cooperation.

This volume is the third and final volume to be edited by Emerson Babb of the University of Florida. I want to express my appreciation to Emerson for his leadership in guiding the Journal during this time. In the six short years of its existence, the Journal has received national and even international recognition by the academic community. I am confident that the Journal's new editor, Jim Rhodes of the University of Missouri, will build on this excellent foundation during the years of his editorship.

In addition to the nine members of the Journal's editorial board, 30 other researchers served as reviewers for this volume. I look forward to the continued contribution of these and other cooperative educators and researchers in the years to come.
